GOOD FOR THOMAS!

Mat. Thomas of the board of education asks a good deal when he insists, as he does, that Bridwell, the superintendent of buildings, shall turn in vouchers for expenses that tell who really got the money, and what work was done for it. Mr. Bridwell has shown a rooted objection to the ordinary forms of business honesty as expressed in vouchers, and he is upheld in this objection by some of the board members, notably Mr. Newman and Mr. Martin. Indeed, the whole board, with possibly two or three exceptions, seems to regard crooked pay rolls, bogus names and missing vouchers as a minor incident of school business not to be taken seriously and by no means inviting punishment.

To the average business man it seems incredible that the board should retain Bridwell in its employ after the revelations already made as to his system of handling school money. It is known of everyone that the names on the pay rolls were bogus in numerous instances; that two entire pay rolls are missing; that Bridwell's family and its connections have constituted a goodly part of the roster of employees; that he connived at the use of bogus names by the tribe of Newman, and that he has shown in innumerable ways his unfitness for the place he holds.

It is not surprising that a man like Mr. Thomas should ask for honest vouchers in public expenditure; what is surprising, however, is the fact that the other decent members of the board do not join him more heartily in his effort to hold Bridwell to an accounting and cleanse the rolls of suspected irregularities.

LUMBER TRUST SCORES.

In the first round of the fight for tariff loot the lumber trust, which has maintained the best-organized lobby in Washington, scored heavily against the forces of revision. The duty on rough lumber is put at $1, and the duty on finished lumber is actually raised. Since the importation of rough lumber is not to be impossible, because of freight rates against it, the lumbermen may congratulate themselves on the success of their program.

Hides did not fare so well, because the New England congressmen who opposed a reduced tariff on lumber wanted free hides for their shoemakers, and voted accordingly. So far as the vote indicates anything, it shows that the New Englanders, holding the balance of power, are reasonably sure to get what they want; and they want everything that will add to their constituents' profits, regardless of the effects of the tariff on other sections of the country. It follows, therefore, that the lumbermen, comparatively few in number, who own most of the standing timber will be protected in their monopoly of the domestic market, while the cattlemen of the west and southwest, and the farmers of the whole country, will sell their hides in competition with the imports from Mexico and South America unprotected by any duty.

It is possible the senate may restore the duty on hides in its draft of a tariff bill, but that is unlikely so long as Aldrich and Lodge and Hale control the situation. The only thing that could make them yield on this point would be a combination of senators from the cattle-producing states too strong to be withstood. In any event, it is certain the lumber duty will not be changed from the house bill, unless it is to make it higher.

Tariff revision, so far, is one huge joke on the consumer.

HOSIERY AND GLOVES.

Mr. Payne makes an ingenious plea for the advance in the duty on hosiery and gloves which has stirred up so much agitation among the women of the country. He says the trouble originated with large department stores which maintain buyers in Germany to get the best goods they can for the least money. Anyway, he adds, the increase only amounts to about a cent a pair on stockings.

Sounds easy and simple, doesn't it? But Mr. Payne fails to mention the fact that the duty already is so high as to constitute a practical prohibition of imports on everything but a few grades of goods, and gives the American manufacturer a monopoly of the market with the privilege of charging extraordinary prices. A cent a pair does not seem much; but when one figures that most of the 90,000,000 people in this country wear hosiery, and that one pair does not constitute an unusual supply for a year's wear, the total profit in such an advance is another matter.

Nor does Mr. Payne allude to the fact that 80 per cent of the hosiery made in this country is sold through one commission house, constituting about as close a trust as the manufacturers could need for the purpose of extortion.

Defending the glove combination and the proposed increase in the tariff on women's gloves, the chairman of the committee declares the advance is small and that it will enable the manufacturers to employ 50,000 people. Perhaps it will; but the woman who faces a tariff of from 80 to 125 per cent on ordinary leather gloves, will fail to see where the compensation comes in for the added burden on the millions who have to foot the bill. The duty is a pleasing donation to the glove makers of one county in New York, but it is no boon to the multitude of consumers who are already groaning under the burden of living costs and can see no hope of relief from extortion in the Payne bill.

Mr. Payne also argues that the added duty is needed to secure revenue. That is a palpable falsehood; the duty is already so high as to make any large revenue from imports impossible, and the added duty will cut down the revenue to a negligible quantity. A frank confession would have admitted that the duty on hosiery and gloves is meant for the sole benefit of the New England and New York manufacturers who have rendered loyal service to the Republican party, and are to get their payment in an increased tariff which will add to their profits.

CASTRO'S RETURN.

Cipriano Castro has landed safely on French territory, and the fun in South America is about to begin. He has announced his intention to resume the presidency of Venezuela at the earliest opportunity, and that he will risk his life in the attempt there can be no doubt. Under the Venezuelan law, the moment he sets foot in that country and notifies Gomez of his intention, he becomes president, and if Gomez does not yield he becomes a usurper. The constitution of Venezuela provides that the president may "withdraw temporarily from the exercise of his functions, in which case he shall call the person qualified to do so under this constitution to take his place, it being understood that when the cause of his withdrawal ceases he shall again take charge of the office with no other formality than giving notice thereof to the official who is acting as president."

It is somewhat remarkable that Castro has always been able to put up a pretty good legal defense when his acts have been called in question. He had no difficulty in convicting the asphalt trust of financing the Matos rebellion, and he clearly proved the Dutch minister in the wrong. The dispatches state that nobody knows just what is going to happen, and that Gomez is afraid to make any decided move against the friends of Castro. That being so, it is evident that if the latter is enabled to land in safety, the people will soon rally to his standard and the asphalt people will have to pack their trunks and take the first steamer for New York, unless the strong arm of the United States is interposed.

To the onlooker, the situation is amusing. A little man who has been declared a criminal and a fugitive from justice by the authorities of the land of his birth decides to return and face his enemies. Forthwith the United States, Great Britain and The Netherlands take measures to prevent any such occurrence. Notes are exchanged between the three powers and warships dot the southern seas. Yet the diminutive individual aforesaid calmly proceeds on his journey and makes preparations to go up against the world, the flesh and the devil.

Castro may not succeed, but if he fails it will be owing to the interference of the self-constituted guardians of Venezuela, and not because the people of that country fail to recognize his title as the legitimate president.

PROPOSED TARIFF BOARD.

Recently a convention of manufacturers was held in Indianapolis for the purpose of getting the various "interests" together to boost for a tariff commission, the members of which would hereafter supply senators and representatives with all the data necessary in the construction of a tariff bill. Congress, however, was not enamored of the Van Cleave plan, and the plan was dropped for the time being. Now comes H. E. Miles, chairman of the executive committee of the committee of 100 appointed at Indianapolis, with the information that the tariff bill, as finally constructed and welded together by Senator Aldrich, will provide for a permanent tariff "board," which is the commission idea under a new name. The New York Sun has the following to say concerning the tariff board, bureau, commission or whatever they choose to call it in order to make it palatable:

As the government now has diplomaticists, consuls, consular agents and special traveling observers of half a dozen different kinds and grades, the necessity of a "tariff bureau" such as is proposed will be immediately apparent to every citizen. It would undoubtedly be asking too much of the state department, the treasury department and the department of commerce and labor to co-operate in gathering, tabulating and explaining the customs laws of other nations. Indeed, the labor required to search out these hidden advantages is so great that it may seem advisable to establish a new executive department to handle the information. Moreover, a "tariff bureau" would supply a few more jobs, thus furnishing convincing evidence of the devotion of the administration to the immortal principle of economy.

The excuses given for the creation and existence of this body of tariff "experts" are plausible enough, but the fact remains that the interests of the consumer would be lost sight of entirely while the members of the board were figuring out the greatest possible benefits for the manufacturers. It is claimed that a commission of this kind would take the tariff question out of politics, but from present indications the next presidential campaign will be fought on this very issue, with the chances of the Democrats very much improved from what they were last year. The country has had a genteel sufficiency of government by commission.

Attorney Milburn has adjusted a halo over the bald pate of St. John D. Rockefeller. Perhaps the four judges may be blinded by the brilliancy, but the rank and file of the people of this country can see the tinsel.

Speaker Cannon's crowd was all awry when the house reversed his ruling and opened up the oil schedule. The Danville man is impotent instead of omnipotent, after all.

Evidently the sheepmen haven't any rights the Wyoming cattlemen are bound to respect. One more foul crime which the Wyoming authorities will fail to punish.

The breweries captured St. Louis in Tuesday's election, and beer will continue to flow like water in the Mound City.

The result of the municipal election at Boise may be taken as an indication of what will happen in the state election a year from next fall.

The Chicago women have started for Washington. It's a fool congressman who will stop to argue the stocking question.

Wheat is higher than at any time during the past twenty years. Flesh and blood continue to be cheaper than bread.

Ex-Senator Fulton of Oregon has been tendered the post of minister to China. Another lame duck connects with a job.

END OF A RED NOSE.

New Flesh-Colored Product That Heals and Hides Skin Imperfections.

A peculiar feature of poslam, a new skin discovery, is that it is naturally flesh-colored and contains no grease, so that when used on the face for the complexion, or for pimples, red noses, or discolorations, its presence cannot be detected. It can thus be applied in the daytime, the natural color of the skin being immediately restored and the actual healing and curing process accomplished in a few days. It can be had of any pharmacist who sells pure drugs. The F. J. Hill Drug Co. make a specialty of it. Fifty cents' worth will answer either for the troubles mentioned in curing ordinary cases of eczema. Healing stops at once.

The Emergency Laboratories, No. 32 West Twenty-fifth street, New York, are the sole dispensing agents for poslam in the United States, and will send an experimental quantity free by mail in plain wrapper to all who write for it. This will show results after an overnight application.
